SHAH ABDICATES THRONE IN IRAN; LEAVES TEHERAN

British and Russian Troops Said To Be Nearing The City

OLDEST SON SUCCEEDS

British Authorities Charge Shah Responsible For "Much Misrule"

LONDON, Sept. 16 — (INS) — Shah Riza Khan Pahlavi of Iran abdicated his throne today, according to word reaching London, and British and Russian troops immediately began to march on Teheran.

Abdication of the Shah was announced in a Teheran radio broadcast picked up in London. Later the British radio issued this report from its Near East correspondent: "British and Russian armored forces are moving in to occupy Teheran. The Russians are less than 3 minutes away."

Reports reaching London indicated the Shah had departed from Teheran by automobile. His oldest son, the Crown Prince of Iran, was said to have been named his successor.

British authorities said the government here had anticipated the Shah's abdication and charged he was responsible for "much misrule" and continually blocked the new government's efforts at reformation.

Drowned Lad To Be Buried In Bristol On Wednesday

The little Bristol lad, Donald T. Johnson, aged seven, who drowned in the canal West of Green Lane, yesterday morning, will be interred in St. Marks Cemetery, here, tomorrow.

The boy, one of five children of George and Mary Johnson, was pronounced dead by Dr. Charles F. Sampson, deputy coroner of Bucks County, early in the afternoon, after members of Bristol Blood Donors Squad, and Bucks County Rescue Squad had made valiant efforts at resuscitation.

The funeral tomorrow will be held at the home of the parents of the lad, 335 Cleveland street, at 2.30. Burial will be in charge of the W. L. Murphy Estate, funeral directors.

It was the barking of Donald's pet dog, left to guard the lad's clothing on the tow-path, that attracted attention of a fisherman, William Drefz, Cambridge street, Philadelphia, to the body floating in the water. The boy had left home sometime before, his family not knowing of his intentions to go swimming.

Recovering the body, Drefz called for aid, with Bristol police chief, Linford J. Jones, responding, together with the two rescue groups. It is believed the child's body had been in the water possibly one or two hours.

VIEWING WEDNESDAY

Friends have been invited to call at Trinity Methodist Church, East Lansdowne, tomorrow from 11 a. m. until two p. m., to pay respects to the late Rev. Francis J. S. Morrow. Service will commence tomorrow at two o'clock in that edifice. Burial of the Rev. Morrow, a former pastor of Tullytown-Emilio-Fallsington Churches, will occur in Fernwood Cemetery, Philadelphia.

If you have a house to rent, advertise it in The Courier.

COUNTY W. C. T. U. NAMES DELEGATES TO CONVENTION

Annual Meeting Held In Friends Meeting House At Makefield

HAD MEMORIAL SERVICE

DOLINGTON, Sept. 16—A majority of the 17 locals of the Bucks County W. C. T. U. were represented at the annual convention of the county organization held in the Makefield Friends meeting house with the Makefield W. C. T. U. as hostess, on Saturday.

With the president, Mrs. Elsie Nixon, Newtown, in charge, the meeting was devoted mostly to the transaction of business which included reports of officers and directors.

Mrs. Wm. DuHamel, Bristol, had charge of the group singing at the opening of the convention, and Miss Emily I. Packer, Newtown, director of the evangelistic department, conducted the devotionals. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Anna K. Shandys, president of the hostess union, and the response was by Miss Gladys H. Harper, Yardley.

During the business session, Mrs. Nixon was appointed the county union's official representative at the convention of the State W. C. T. U., which will be held in Philadelphia from October 16th until October 20th.

Reports of the county officers followed, and that of the treasurer, Mrs. R. L. Horner, Langhorne, showed there had been a gain of 37 members during the year, and that there are 99 L. T. B. members in the county. There are also 164 T. L. B. members in the county.

"Hold fast" unions include Bensalem, Bristol, Chalfont, Perkasie, Quakertown and Warrington; and Bristol, Churchville, Bensalem, Langhorne, Perkasie, Quakertown and Warrington were designated as "Fruitful" unions.

Following the reports of the officers a piano solo was rendered by Janet Starkey, of this place.

The following directors' reports were presented: Child welfare, Mrs. Anna K. Shandys, of this place; institutes, Miss Effie Watson, Fallsington; temperance and missions, Mrs. Helen R. Pownall, Richboro; Y. T. C., Miss Gladys H. Harper, Yardley; international relations, Mrs. Mabel Briggs, Makefield. All these reports showed excellent work throughout the county.

A short memorial service was conducted as a tribute to members who died during the year. They included: Mrs. Laura Gill, Richboro; Miss Nellie Gilton, Yardley, and Miss Elizabeth Wing and Mrs. Anna Satterthwaite, Fallsington. Miss Packer gave a short talk at the conclusion of the service, and Mrs. DuHamel made the prayer at the close of the morning session.

Mrs. Frank Cassidy Assumes Presidency of Auxiliary

LANGHORNE, Sept. 16—The young women members of Junior Auxiliary of the American Legion, Jesse W. Soby Post, addressed members of the senior Auxiliary in the Memorial House, here, last evening. The girl, Miss Jane Salvadore, who represented the local Auxiliary at Keystone Girls' Camp at Greer College, for 13 days in August, recounted her experiences there.

This being "Junior Night", a silk American flag was presented by the seniors to the Junior Auxiliary. The presentation was made by retiring president of the seniors, Mrs. Ernest Robinson, to Mrs. Joseph Zalot, advisor, and Mrs. William S. Hart, flag chairman of the juniors.

After opening the session and conducting old business, Mrs. Robinson turned the gavel over to Mrs. Frank Cassidy, who is serving as president for 1941-42. Records were in charge of Mrs. Frank Bonnell; with treasurer Mrs. Robert Leedom giving her report.

The date of Saturday, November 8th, was set for the Armistice dinner of the Auxiliary, with Soby Post members and friends being invited. The dinner chairman will be Mrs. Bonnell.

A decision was made to call meetings at 8.15 instead of eight o'clock hereafter, sessions to start promptly at that hour.

Mrs. Robinson reported on the journey made by the post and Auxiliary members to the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Coatesville on August 24th. At that time gifts were taken to the invalid men, and a program presented.

CONCEDE TEMPORARILY TO PARENTS' REQUEST

Dr. Heckman, State Dept. of Instruction, Agrees to Keep Pupils In Croydon

ALL HALF SESSIONS

Arriving from Harrisburg to confer with Bucks County superintendent of public schools, a number of parents of Bristol Township public school pupils and the latter's attorney, Dr. Oliver Heckman, a member of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Instruction, agreed at a meeting held in Croydon yesterday afternoon, to permit grades eight and nine, including all pupils of those grades in the township, to temporarily go on half session at Croydon school.

The matter is the outgrowth, it was stated at one of two sessions held yesterday, of letters written by some residents of the township to the State Board of Instruction at Harrisburg, in which objection was made to plans outlined by the board of directors for the ninth grade in particular.

The new, temporary schedule will go into effect next Monday, the board of directors announced this morning; with the plan which started yesterday being followed for this week.

Under the plan starting next Monday morning, grades one to seven, inclusive, from Croydon area, will start at eight a. m., for half sessions; and grades eight and nine, all pupils in those junior high school classes from the entire township, will start classes at 12 o'clock noon in Croydon school.

Dr. Heckman conferred on arrival

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT
(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Risks and Costs

Washington, Sept. 13. FEW Americans, other than those incurably isolationist, could fail to respond favorably to the speech of the President last Thursday, in which he gave this nation's answer to the various Nazi attacks upon American vessels. It was devoid of bluff or bluster, clear, strong, self-respecting, altogether admirable.

AS leader of the nation, Mr. Roosevelt hardly could have said less, and it is easy to understand the difficulties which prevented him from saying more. Nevertheless, there was more which could have been said. Perhaps he went as far as it was possible for him to go at this time, but from the standpoint of our own national interests it is unfortunate the full truth could not be told. The full truth is that, advanced as is the position he has taken in the order to shoot on sight Nazi submarines or raiders in "defensive waters," it still is an inadequate position. It fails fully to measure up to the logic of the President's presentation. It does not meet the actualities of the situation and it imperils the cause to which we are committed—to wit, the crushing of Hitler. That being our openly declared goal, it is impossible to argue that what we are doing is consistent or sensible, because it is perfectly clear that we are doing far less than we can do.

THE President tells the American people and the world that Hitler's first purpose is to dominate the Atlantic Ocean and that his next step would be domination of the United States and the Western Hemisphere. He tells them, further, that without the British Navy we could not prevent that domination. These things

MORRISVILLE MAN GIVEN JAIL TERM FOR WORTHLESS CHECKS

Rocco Pugliese Given Term of One to Three Years In County Prison

WANTED IN TRENTON

Olney Man Pleads Guilty to Operating Car Without Operator's Privilege

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 16—One to three years in the Bucks County Prison was the sentence imposed on Rocco Pugliese, of Morrisville, a former Trentonian yesterday when he pleaded guilty before Judge Hiram H. Keller in Bucks county criminal court. He was charged with passing worthless checks and stealing checks. A detainer from the Trenton police has been lodged against him here.

Chief of Police Albert Cooper, Morrisville, testified that Pugliese passed checks on Arthur Behr, of 39 Philadelphia avenue, Morrisville, and on a Trenton cafe operator. Judge Keller sentenced him on two counts, the sentences to run concurrently.

Walter S. Valentine, 21, Olney, pleaded guilty yesterday to operating an automobile after the operator's privilege had been suspended or revoked. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $100 and costs, the minimum sentence for this offense. Valentine's father, a well known hosiery manufacturer, informed the Court that his son's car had been disposed of and assured the Court there would be no more "car trouble."

Valentine was in trouble over a car when he was 16 when the boy he was driving with killed three people in an accident. Valentine served 18 months in the Huntingdon Reformatory.

Refreshments were served the group. The next meeting will occur on October 20th.

Accardi-Campbell Nuptial Ceremony Occurs Sunday

CROYDON, Sept. 16—A Fall wedding took place Sunday afternoon at 4.15 o'clock in St. Thomas R. C. Church, uniting Miss Dorothy Campbell, Bridge-water, and Mr. Joseph Accardi, Beaver street, Bristol.

The bride entered the edifice on the arm of her brother, Mr. Harry Campbell, who gave her in marriage. The Lohengrin wedding march was played by Miss Elizabeth Tryon, Croydon.

The maid of honor was Miss Ann Padden, Vineland, N. J., cousin of the bride; and the bridesmaids were: Miss Ann Ventimiglia, New York; Miss Agnes Polizzi, and Mrs. John Dugan, Jr., Bristol. Mr. Angelo Scialabba, New York, was best man; and the ushers were Mr. Joseph Iono, Bristol, and Mr. Rocco Accardi, brother of the groom.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin, made on princess lines; and the wide full skirt swept to a lengthy train. The dress had a square neckline, finished with a narrow tulle pleating. The sleeves had a diamond open-cut work design over tulle. The veil of net was attached to a wreath of orange-blossoms. She wore a string of pearls, and her slippers were of white satin. Her spray of flowers consisted of white roses and orchids.

The maid of honor and bridesmaids wore dresses made of velveteen. The dresses had form-fitting bodices, sweetheart neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. The shades were in the colors of Autumn leaves. The maid of honor wore gold, and her head-dress and spray was composed of yellow roses. The bridesmaids wore lime-pearl tone, and their flowers were talisman roses. All wore gold slippers.

The bride's gifts to her attendants were strings of pearls; and the groom presented the men in the bridal party with gold key chains.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Mary Romig, was attired in a beige dress, black accessories, and wore a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother, Mrs. Dora Accardi, wore a black crepe dress, trimmed with black lace, and wore a corsage of white asters.

A reception was held Sunday evening at Leghorn Farms, Lincoln Highway, with 300 guests attending.

For a journey to Canada, Mrs. Accardi wore a black faille suit, white tailored blouse, and black and white accessories. Her corsage was of orchids. The couple will reside with the groom's mother in Bristol.

CROP STORAGE VETO

The President's veto of the cotton and wheat surplus freezing act was expected. In fact, it may have been counted on from the day that Congress found that it had to yield to the farm lobby.

The reserve stocks of these two crops, on which the government has lent money, are sufficient to supply the country for about a year. Wheat and corn growers argued rightly that these reserves depress the price of the current year's crop. Their plan was to freeze the reserves until after the emergency.

The President pointed out in his veto message that the growers should be satisfied with parity prices—which have been achieved by rigging the market through the AAA loan policy—and that in times such as these, government-owned stocks may be needed. In effect, he stood off the farm drive to get the money while the getting is good. The veto also covered the provision which would have enabled wheat growers to exceed their allotment if the excess were used for feed on the farm.

There will be a strong movement to persuade Congress to override the veto, for the farm leaders who have won billions in subsidies will feel that their standing depends on their ability to cut farmers in on the war defense boom. But the President's argument is sound and he is under political pressure to hold the cost of living down in order to escape a heavy opposition vote next year from people who are unable to increase their incomes to maintain what might be called cost-of-living parity.

Besides, farm legislation has long passed the confusion confounded stage and is approaching the point where a farmer or a taxpayer will be unable to tell whether the government is putting out billions in subsidies for growing crops, for retarding crops or for both, or why.

LEAVES TURN COLOR

Annually, when the reds and yellows begin to appear in the woodlands, the comment is heard "Yes, its beautiful—but just wait until after the first frost!" The old folk-tale concerning the part frost plays in the color changes of the leaves dies hard.

Those who have studied those changes assert that frost plays no part in the process. It is a matter of chemistry not yet fully understood. Throughout the spring the leaves are colored green by the presence of chlorophyll, a strange plant substance which converts carbon dioxide and water into food for the tree. When the season begins to wane, the chlorophyll slowly changes to another form, known as plastids. The plastids have a chemical coloring known as carotinoids, which react to sunlight and cooler temperatures. Some of them turn bright yellow, others turn red.

Another color factor lies in the amount of plant sugar trapped in the leaves when the branches cut off the sap veins in preparation for winter. This plant sugar reacts to chill nights and changes color, sometimes to red or purple.

Not the brilliance of autumn is not brought about by the first frost but from the chemistry of the leaves themselves.

All life is like football. An obscure man digs up the old jokes for the radio and a famous comedian gets credit for the score.

BARRED 7 SEVENS by MARYSE RUTLEDGE

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

While his host was away, Helm stroled back to the piano. He slid onto the bench, and closed his eyes. That bar of music Carlie had scribbled, seemed as clear as if it were before him. He never should have left it with the Switzers. He tried to reconstruct it: wobbly little notes, flagged at the stem—8th—16th, they called them. Then three flying notes attached to a bar, climbing upward on the staff, a round black note ending the theme. It might have been the kind of music Breanu was playing when he came in. Helm's fingers plucked at the ivories. He was pretty sure now the secret of the original envelope lay somewhere here. And he wasn't confiding that to Breanu. Nor was he telling that he knew where the Switzer man was.

The telephone rang. Breanu, with a bottle and glasses, hurried in, and took the call. Helm didn't move. Carlie, a ghostly presence, seemed to be in the room, full throated in her laughter. But her widely-set gray eyes were afraid as they had been when the knife went into her. Breanu listened to a muffled voice at the other end of the wire; rang off, and looked somberly at Helm. "It's for tonight. Be here at eight. I've got to see that everything goes smoothly. We've got men there, and a paid guard. The crates are being packed now with parts of agricultural implements mixed in with the arms. They'll be loaded on a canal boat and carried along the river to the tramp ship. From then on the captain takes the responsibility." Breanu added, "Tie-tie business," and emptied his glass.

"Fine work," Kurt Helm applauded. "I'll get along now, and be back. When is the big pay-off?" Breanu's silky eyes gleamed in fleeting malice. "When the goods are delivered, my friend. And it's quite a trip!" "Oh, you'll get something out of them sooner than that," Helm waved, and moved, unscorted, into the foyer.

Garrison, back of his desk in the library, looked at David Farland. "I've just had Mrs. Rider on the telephone," he said kindly. "Jane's home." But his eyes were worried.

David grinned his relief for the first time in many days. "Wait till you see what I've got to show you, Mr. Garrison." He flung on the desk, the page with Carlie's musical notation, and the letters and papers Fan had given him from Carlie's box. It was the stuff left with Fan Rubley and came originally from the man who barred his sevens.

Garrison bent his gray head over them. "By Jove, I think I know now!" he exclaimed. "But it isn't going to be easy."

Fan Rubley waited all that Sunday afternoon for word from Breanu. The telephone didn't ring. It was appallingly quiet in the apartment; the lull seemed to spread beyond the silent rooms, as if a storm were gathering.

Mirrors vividly reflected Fan's purple housecoat, the splash of red lips against her round white face. Mat Breanu was through with her. He was after the Rider girl. And nothing Fan could do—

Not! Nothing! Fan stared at the cabinet from which she had taken Carlie's tin box. David must be with Garrison now, with letters which proved there was a man in Carlie's past; a man who marked his dates, his figure sevens with a bar, in the foreign way. Breanu did that.

How had she ever hurt anybody? Her blood and her race felt proud. She was loyal, at least, to a country which had given her asylum. Her Russian soul questioned and answered. "I'm not an enemy. I'm not a coward. Why should Mat believe that my ancestors must condemn me?"

Finally, she couldn't resist it any more. She rang up Breanu. No one answered. Where was he?

Fan dressed very carefully, and went out.

There was no sound in Breanu's apartment as she opened the door with her key. The same ominous silence she had felt in her own apartment webbed the familiar rooms. Fan stood motionless in the hall.

Of course, this Sunday, Doremus was off with her Selinda. And Mat? She imagined him with the Rider girl somewhere. Meanwhile, the place seemed hollow in its magnificence. She stood listening. Then she heard a voice.

Breanu was talking to someone on the phone in the living room. Fan edged closer, her heart muffled.

Mat's voice was low, decisive. "I said I'd be there, didn't I? Yes—by ten. I'll expect the usual escort over the creek. Blue lights, if the way is free." He snarled, "I tell you the stuff's got to get tonight! The captain won't wait beyond the tide tomorrow morning." He hung up.

Breanu hadn't heard Fan enter. She backed slowly out of the front door; closed it and rang the bell. She knew now, positively. And she would soon know whether Mat trusted her.

Fan rang her three-two signal. She waited, and rang again, deliberately. So he didn't want to see her! No wonder, when tonight—

Breanu finally opened the door. Her expression warned him. She stood there, in her black gown and furs. He drew her in, with a show of warmth. He thought, Helm's coming. I can't have her here. He kissed her cheek.

"Is this an intrusion or a pleasure?" Fan said, pushing by him. "Are you glad to see me?" She walked into the living room. For a moment, turning toward him, she hesitated. If he had said one word, or opened his arms to her, she would have told him about Farland and Carlie's letters.

But Breanu's dark handsome face was closed to her. "We had no date tonight," he said.

"No," Fan agreed, her round blue eyes on him. "You have other engagements. Give me a drink, Mat. Then I'll go."

It was the way he presented the drink which lashed Fan's pride—the sardonic twist of his mouth, his arrogance ill-concealed as he lifted his glass to hers. She held her glass higher than his.

"Where are you and I going, Mat?" "Probably to perdition, my dear. Do you mind?" He was mocking her with his smile, but not with his eyes. "I do—terribly mind," Fan said.

"If you weren't there, it wouldn't be what you call perdition." She snatched her glass at his feet. "Do you ever—no, lie?"

His gaze narrowed. "Why? Don't we all lie—at times?"

"I suppose so," Fan stared at the shattered glass on the rug. "What are you doing tonight, Mat?" Their eyes met.

"Nothing." He carelessly turned to the piano, his back to her. And music that tore at your heart ripped from his short fingers. He lifted his dark head to the photograph of Carlie, laughing down at him.

"You do lie!" Fan said in passion. "You're not dressed for dinner. And it's seven. We usually," she added, "have dinner together, don't we, on Sunday? Let's go somewhere." She stood over him.

He didn't even look up. "I have an engagement, later." He fingered the keys; and people danced again with flowers behind their cars.

"Mat, do you love me?" "No," he said.

"Then it's all over?" "Yes," he said, and didn't look up. "So you have an engagement to-night?" Would he answer that frankly? Take her into his confidence? She gave him one more chance to lie. "With Jane Rider?"

She had gone too far. He almost upset the piano bench in his violent movement towards Fan. "Listen, lady, we're washed up, you and I. Get that! You can't prove anything on me. And if you try, I'll show what your word is worth."

Fan backed away from him. She had only to tell him that she knew what his date was tonight, and he might kill her.

"Get out!" he said, his eyes on the clock. "Get out!"

"Mean that, Mat? For good?" Fan lingered at the door, as if she might never see this room again. He walked toward her. There was melancholy and a savage obstinacy in his face and walk. He wasn't all evil. He wasn't all bad. But he had loved too much and hated too much.

"Get out," he said coldly. "Mat—please—!" Fan made her last appeal.

"Get out!" he reiterated. "I suppose you know what I can do to you," Fan laughed that defiantly. "You see—" She was about to tell him that she knew about tonight.

"Get out!" he said, and fairly pushed her. She could never forget his eyes as he did that. They dared her. They didn't care what she did. Mat Breanu had thrown her out.

The pounding of Fan's heart seemed to fill the telephone booth. It was all over. She was going to betray Mat. You could stand just so much! She dialed Attorney Garrison's number. David Farland answered the telephone. He sounded agitated when he recognized her voice, and said, "Wait a moment."

Then Garrison was on, his usually charming tone hurried. "Farland brought me the letters, Fan. You've done me a great service, my dear."

Fan's mouth was dry. She could hardly swallow. "Thanks, but you may appreciate more what I'm going to tell you. It's about Mat—he's smuggling out guns tonight from some place along the Hackensack River—to follow Nazis of his in Roumania. He's got to be stopped. For heaven's sake, Dick, staring through the glass door of the booth. She hadn't noticed the man who had followed her into the drug store. She hardly noticed him now. But her habitual gesture, as a tall woman, of bending over, saved her life.

The shot missed her, hitting the spot where her head had been. The gunman vanished.

"Operator, trace that call!" Garrison slammed down the telephone, and cracked orders. His man, McGuire, was at his elbow, and several other men whom David had never seen, came in. This so-called playboy-lawyer snapped into action which revealed him as one of real executive authority.

"Get hold of Bill Wright!" he ordered David. "He'll know the road." His gray eyes rested briefly on his protégé's sizzling red hair, and bating face. "That night you and Bill followed Breanu, you saw blue lights beyond the creek?"

David nodded.

"Very important. I want maps. What are you waiting for?"

Someone brought him maps of the Jersey meadow flats. Someone else—with Fan's call traced to a drug store on upper Madison Avenue—raced off. David, in a haze, located Bill Wright.

Bill didn't seem surprised, and winked at David as he straddled the desk chair, surveying the maps. "This is my scoop, Chief," he said.

"I know where Breanu is going to-night, and you're just in time to beat him to it."

He snuggled his left arm in its sling, and leaned over the maps, talking fast. Then he straightened with a little grimace of pain on his lean brown face. Confound that arm!

"But listen, there's more to the picture than you have," he said. "Carlie's killer is on the loose. Have the Rubley woman's apartment watched. I think Jane Rider's safe."

"Jane!" David cried out. "She isn't in this?"

His friend Bill gave him a grave look. "Things are breaking. We've got to take them as they come."

"If Jane's in danger—" David began.

Garrison's face was haggard. "We've got to take a chance, my boy," he said to David. "We haven't much time."

Why Not A Cobbler?

By Frances Lee Barton

"WHAT shall we have for dessert?" Why not a cobbler—a peach cobbler while fresh peaches are in season, or even with canned peaches? This is a change from the usual dessert—and a very delightful change at that.

Peach Cobbler
3 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca; ½ cup sugar; ¼ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon nutmeg; 2 tablespoons melted butter; 2½ cups canned sliced peaches, drained; 1 cup peach juice; 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

2 cups sifted cake flour; 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder; ½ teaspoon salt; 6 tablespoons butter or other shortening; ¾ cup milk.

Combine tapioca, sugar, salt, nutmeg, butter, peaches, and fruit juices; let stand 15 minutes, or while crust is being made. Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk all at once and stir carefully until all flour is dampened. Then stir vigorously until mixture forms a soft dough and follows spoon around bowl. Turn out immediately on slightly floured board and knead 30 seconds. Roll ¼ of dough into strip, 2 inches wide and ¼ inch thick; line sides of 8x8x2-inch pan, fitting closely into corners. Fill with peach mixture. Roll remaining ¾ dough ¼-inch thick; with sharp knife make slits to permit escape of steam. Fit over peaches, pressing edges of dough together with fork dipped in flour. Bake in hot oven (450° F.) 15 minutes; then reduce heat to moderate (350° F.) and bake 15 to 20 minutes longer. Sprinkle powdered sugar over top, if desired. Serves 8.

The Great Game of Politics

are true beyond question. And being true, the President's speech does not fully meet the facts. For one thing, it conveys the impression that the United States insists upon the freedom of the seas in order peacefully to pursue its commerce and is solely concerned in defending itself.

WHEREAS the facts are that our vessels are engaged in transporting munitions and supplies to the British, which they must have to survive the German attack, and our Icelandic occupation is of immense help in that direction. For another thing, the speech utterly failed to mention the fact that there is still on the statute books a neutrality law which cramps our national muscles; and that we still adhere to a policy of refusing to convoy the cargo boats which take our goods to England. In addition, our merchant vessels are prohibited from carrying guns with which to defend themselves.

SO long as these prohibitions remain in force this nation is in the position of a man who goes into action to defend his home with one hand tied behind him. If, as the President says, Hitler's purpose is to dominate the Atlantic and then dominate ourselves, clearly the sooner Hitler is crushed, the less the cost to us. No policy that does not permit the use of our full weight is an adequate policy. Any policy that unnecessarily prolongs the war, even if victory comes in the end, is an unsound policy.

OUR policy is doing exactly that. It is conceded that Hitler cannot be beaten except by the United States. It is conceded that two things needed to get the supplies to the British and insure against Hitler domination of the seas are to arm our merchant vessels and to use our navy to convoy supplies. Those are the steps needed to make our position logical, consistent and effective. Those are the steps needed to measure up to the national policy that, at all costs, Hitler must be crushed. This is so clear that not even the isolationists would dispute it. Once you accept the thesis that Hitler's defeat is essential to our national safety, there is no ground for argument.

OF course, the President appreciates this. So does every reasonably informed person. Why, then, is it not done? Why is not the remnant of this handicapping Neutrality Act wiped out? The reason given is that the President could not get the repeal through Congress and that the people are not ready for "full participation." But, if the people accept—and an overwhelming majority of them do—the Roosevelt declaration that Hitler menaces our safety, it is difficult to believe that they want to retain a law which handicaps the President and helps Hitler. They are not that stupid. Once it is fully explained to them—as the President can explain—that the Neutrality Act stands in the way of full exercise of the national strength to avert the Hitler menace, it is impossible to doubt their response. It is regrettable that we have to approach the inevitable full participation so falteringly. The longer the delay, the higher the cost and the greater the risks.

A White Birch Shades the Entry

A WHITE birch throws a mantle of shade over the winding path that leads to the front door of this New England-type house. In the distance, a white church steeple thrusts itself above banked trees. A rail fence encloses a garden of shrubs and flowers.

This is America. It is an American home, typical of millions that stretch the length and breadth of this land.

This American home is L-shaped for convenience and appearance. The short wing permits a porch-protected front door—a boon in stormy weather. It adds size and interest to the bright green asphalt shingle roof which fire-protects the house against air-borne sparks and flying brands.

The porch, placed against one wall of a first floor bedroom, posed a special problem to Randolph Evans, who designed the house for the Monthly Small House Club, 140 Nassau Street, New York City, for it impaired the privacy of the bedroom, when seen from the porch.

To insure complete privacy, without reducing the amount of daylight in the room, he placed a panel of Insulux glass blocks in the bedroom wall. These economical building units, sparkling diffusers of light, are decorated on the room side with glass shelves—ideal for plants and bric-a-brac.

A compact kitchen is so efficiently arranged that it is within easy reach of the garden, the basement and the dining space. Upstairs has been left unfinished—but it will easily accommodate a bathroom and two bedrooms—if, and when, the family calls for them.

the trail of a job and again finding adventure. This time her path crosses those of a young prizefighter, his invalid mother, and his hardboiled manager. When Malsie is hired as a companion for the mother she learns that the boy hates his career as a fighter.

How she battles it out with the manager and winds up by falling in love with him makes for one of the most entertaining films of the entire series.

BRISTOL THEATRE

FIVE BACKS RETURN TO BRIGHTEN HOPES AT MORRISVILLE

Inexperience On Line May Hinder Last Year's Champs

OPEN FRIDAY NIGHT

Bulldogs Appear To Be On March To Another Title

By Jack Gili

Morrisville High School, the institution that ranks behind Bristol and Bensalem in terms of student enrollment figures, but the school that can always outdistance them in points per grid contest, faces a tough ten game lay-out this fall with nine varsity lettermen returning for active duty. What's more, they open the campaign early, meeting Fred Burbank's New Jersey School for the Deaf this Friday evening under the arc lights at Morrisville.

Veteran Johnny Hoffman has been putting the Bulldogs through their customary stiff workouts for the past two weeks. It is no secret that the Deaf School is about due to come up with one of those extraordinary units.

Offensive ball carrying experience, a big factor in high school play, should be well taken care of this year at the Blue and Gold contests. No less than five ball toters return to carry the leather for the ferocious canine. Harry Wilcox will be back to bark the signals at quarterback, line plunging Bud McAllister will be appreciated, and sweeping Bill Hutchinson will be a year better and pass slinging Whipper Wallace will complete many a throw. At least Hoffman hopes they will accomplish such feats.

No team, however, is better than its line. The offensive blocking must be present up front to enable backs to perform to perfection. Bob Beadle and Chick Hulse were lost at end, Jack McGowan graduated from a tackle slot and Captain Mary Gandleman left a guard position unfilled.

Bill Clemens, 280 pounds of tackle, will be back to bolster one slot, while Don McClanen and Jimmy Murray are fighting for the other. Andy La Rue, a veteran of last year, has a guard spot sewed up, but the other side is a battle between Bob Hibbs, Jack Ulrich, Jim Lorimer, Ray Yocum and Harry Krier. Hibbs, a stocky surprise, has flashed fine form in early practice sessions. Vince DaBronze, selected as last year's outstanding conference football player, leaves a large gap at center to be filled, but Elmer Olsen has been pleasing to Hoffman's keen eyes. Don Elhoff and Gentry are expected to see reserve duty at center.

Hoffman, who is being assisted by Floyd Kerr this semester, paired his large turnout of fifty men down to 31. The squad, two short of three full teams, will be the Bulldogs official outfit of the 1941 campaign.

With Wilcox, McAllister, Hutchinson and Wallace back to lug the leather, and with Bill May, a transformed end, filling in often, the Bulldogs appear to have the necessary balance. A tough ten game card finds the Blue and Gold facing the Deaf School, Trenton High, Langhorne, Burlington, Bridgeport, Conshohocken, Bensalem, Trenton Catholic, Princeton and Bristol. If they break even they will be successful. Anything better than that will prove to the district that they are really outstanding.

SPORTS COACH WANTS TO HEAR FROM KUBA

Sept. 13, 1941.

Editor Courier: You folks in Bristol and vicinity, have in your midst our own Stephen "Eagle" Kuba, Hazleton's best all-around athlete, who played professional baseball, basketball, football, track man, captained, managed, coached, trained and instructed young athletes of this region for many years.

Stephen "Eagle" Kuba was also affiliated with Charles "Pop" Keichner, scout for the St. Louis Cardinals up until last year, when Kuba decided to give up his duties due to his age and fellowship, to give an opportunity to younger athletes to perform in his place.

I have learned that Kuba is now in the employ of a Rohm & Haas Corporation in your city, also have learned that Kuba's services are in demand up here with the local N. Y. A. as athletic instructor, and our young athletes have written to county officials asking for Mr. Kuba as their chief instructor in sports, but the N. Y. A. does not know of Mr. Kuba's address up to date.

Eagle Kuba, as he is known to all his friends, is an ex-Sgt. of the 34th Infantry, United States Army, was picked as the 3rd Corps' best all-around athlete while in the service of the Government.

If Mr. Kuba reads this item in your valuable paper, he is requested to get in touch with Mr. Anthony Zenkofski, coach at his earliest convenience.

MORE WORKERS NEEDED

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—Philadelphia's booming defense industries will need 2,200 additional machine tool workers by September 1st and another 10,000 by January 1st, according to William F. Brunton, assistant director of the Board of Education's defense program. If these quotas are to be met, Brunton said, 50 more men must be found to teach mechanical trades.

County W. C. T. U. Names Delegates to Convention

Lunch was served by members of the hostess union, and at the conclusion of the lunch a meeting of the executive board was held. Miss Helen E. Saurman, Churchville, had charge of the devotion at the opening of the afternoon session, and prayer was made by Mrs. Horner, Langhorne.

The following recommendations were made during the session of the executive board: That the time for holding the county conventions be changed from the second to the third Saturday in September, that the members of the mid-Winter executive board pay for their own luncheons, that a copy of the history of Frances E. Willard be placed in the library in the Bucks County Historical Museum, Doylestown, and that Mrs. Anna K. Shaudys be appointed L. T. director in place of Mrs. Mary Cocks, Newtown, who resigned. These recommendations were adopted by the convention.

Mrs. Lucy Harper, Yardley, chairman of the delegate committee to the State convention in Philadelphia submitted a list of the following delegates: Mrs. H. Hoster, Churchville; Mrs. Lizzie Withington, Bensalem; Mrs. Elsie Nixon, Newtown; Miss Elizabeth Woodman, Wrightstown; Mrs. Anna K. Shaudys, Makefield; Mrs. Hannah Hartman, Fallsington.

THE POCKETBOOK of KNOWLEDGE BY TOPPS

Mrs. Harry Headley, Bristol; Mrs. Florence Tischenor, Wrightstown; Mrs. R. L. Horner, Langhorne; Mrs. Helen R. Pownall, Richboro, and Mrs. Lucy Harper, Yardley.

Mrs. John B. Force, Yardley, who gave a report for the scientific temperance instruction department, also directed a skit, in which a graduation exercise of a scientific temperance instruction college was depicted. "Graduates" included Mrs. Edith Bilbee, Miss Gladys H. Harper and Mrs. Anna K. Shaudys. Mrs. Lucy Harper, who represented the college, presented the "diplomas," and the address was given by Mrs. DuHamel.

Mrs. Mary Lamb, Trevoise, gave a report of "The Union Signal," and in the absence of Miss Anna Buckman her report on flowers and missions was read. The report of the publicity committee was given by Mrs. Myrtle Kester, Newtown, and Mrs. Maude E. R. Stuckert, also of Newtown, gave a report for the Christian citizenship committee. Miss Emily I. Packer, Newtown, who gave a report of the evangelistic committee, said in closing: "Discard all things which make no contributions to life."

Before adjournment a vocal duet was rendered by the Misses Irma and Mildred Slack, of this place, and Miss Mildred, Dilliplane, Yardley, played a piano solo. She also served as accompanist for the skit given earlier in the afternoon.

The school board today made public a letter of apology it had received from Terrance Taffe, for statements allegedly made at a recent meeting of the board and the taxpayers of the district. The letter follows:

Bristol, Pa.

September 10, 1941.

WHEREAS, I, Terrance Taffe, of the Township of Bristol, in the County of Bucks and State of Pennsylvania, attended a meeting of citizens of said Township with the Board of School Directors of the School District of said Township, on Sept. 4, 1941.

AND WHEREAS, I am accused of stating at said meeting that the Board of Directors of said School District "were crooked and bums."

Now I do hereby retract any such statement if made by me as I have implicit confidence in the honesty and integrity of the members of said Board. If any such statement or similar statement was made by me it was made in the excitement of the occasion, and I did not intend to reflect upon the honesty or integrity of the said Board or cast aspersion upon them in any way.

This retraction may be used by the members of the said Board of School Directors in such manner as they may desire and in justice to them in order to clear them from any suspicion of

A De Luxe Dish

By Frances Lee Barton

"DE LUXE," according to the dictionary is something "specially elegant, sumptuous or elaborate." The de Luxe Lemon Pudding (see recipe below) is certainly not an elaborate dessert, but the flavor is sumptuous and thus its name. Easily made, economical, healthful, light, very tasty—what more could one desire even in a "de Luxe" dessert?

Lemon Pudding de Luxe
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin; 1 1/2 cups hot water; 1/4 teaspoon salt; 1/2 cup sugar; 1/4 cup lemon juice; 1/2 cup heavy cream.
Dissolve gelatin in hot water; add salt, sugar, and lemon juice. Chill until cold and syrupy. Fold in cream, whipped only until thick and shiny, but not stiff. Turn into large serving dish or individual molds. Chill until firm. Serves 6 to 8.
May be served plain, with crushed fresh raspberries, or with blueberry sauce.

Defenders Like These Papers, Army Men Say

A SURVEY OF SOLDIERS DEFINITELY SHOWS THAT A HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER, NEXT TO A PERSONAL LETTER, MAKES A BOY IN TRAINING HAPPIER THAN ANY OTHER ONE THING. SEND YOUR SON, BROTHER OR SWEETHEART THE COURIER. WE'LL MAIL IT TO ANY CAMP FOR ONLY—

$3.00 A YEAR

Nothing makes a selective service man in camp happier than a letter from home or a home-town newspaper in the daily mail, army officials said recently after an extensive survey.

Next in order, the selective service youth likes sweets such as candy, cookies and chocolates—and chewing gum!

Officers say that on the march the gum helps keep the boys from drinking too much water and from dipping into their lunch ration.

Other offerings which bring a smile of pleasure to the enrollee include a general repertoire of utilities among which are books of stamps, flashlights, a towel now and then, toilet articles, and reading materials.

Officers say that if relatives want to be sure their addressee gets what's mailed to him, they should address the letter or package in this way: Name first, his company or battery second, his regiment third, and, lastly the name of the post office.
